A Young Iowa Widow Weds the Friend of her Son
The story of the marriage of Florentine Moses and Elmer M. Higginson, of the Young Iowa Colony at Elfenbein, was told in the New York World last week.

Florentine, a young woman of forty-five, who had been widowed for two years, was the daughter of a wealthy farmer in Iowa. Her husband had died in a tragic accident, leaving her with three young children. She had been struggling to make ends meet ever since.

Elmer M. Higginson, a young man of twenty-five, had been a close friend of Florentine's son, who had died in a hunting accident. He had been with the family on the day of the accident and had been deeply affected by the loss of Florentine's son.

When Florentine's eldest son, who was a medical student at the University of Iowa, heard of the marriage, he wrote to his mother, expressing his concern that she might be placing herself and her children in danger.

Florentine, however, was determined to make the best of her situation. She wrote back to her son, expressing her hope that he would understand her decision. She said that she felt she had no choice but to marry Elmer, as she was unable to support herself and her children on her own.

Florentine and Elmer were married in a simple ceremony in the Young Iowa Colony. The ceremony was witnessed by several of Florentine's family and friends.

Florentine's eldest son, who was a medical student at the University of Iowa, was unable to attend the ceremony due to his studies. He wrote to his mother, expressing his concern that the marriage might be a mistake.

Florentine wrote back to her son, expressing her hope that he would understand her decision. She said that she felt she had no choice but to marry Elmer, as she was unable to support herself and her children on her own.

Florentine and Elmer were happy together. They were married for many years, and had several children of their own.
Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Strawn entertained a large party of friends at their home Tuesday night. Mr. Strawn had been spending several days with them during the past month. The entertainment consisted of refreshments, and dancing. All had a pleasant time, and the strains of music and conversation filled the room. The party lasted until late into the night, and everyone seemed to enjoy themselves. The next day, the guests began to depart, and the Strawns saw them off with a warm goodbye.
