FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1904.

The fire bell was rung vigorously, but no sign of the flames was found. The alarm at the bank appeared in about half an hour, and after the room was cleared of its contents, it was noticed that there was a hole in the side of the building near the fire escape. On further investigation it was found that the hole was made by a bullet which had entered the building through the wall and caused the damage. The bullet was traced back to the room where it had entered, and the cause of the fire was discovered to be a wire from a dynamite explosion which had been placed in the bank.

The fire was quickly extinguished by the firefighters, who arrived at the scene within a few minutes of the alarm. The damage was limited to the room where the explosion occurred and the adjacent rooms. The bank lost a considerable amount of money due to the fire, and the bank was closed for a short time to allow for repairs. The cause of the explosion was later determined to be the result of a criminal act, and the perpetrator was later apprehended.

The bank was eventually repaired and reopened, and the business continued as usual. However, the incident served as a reminder of the importance of security and the need for proper precautions to prevent such incidents from occurring in the future. The bank implemented new security measures, including the installation of additional windows and doors, and the use of reinforced building materials. The bank also increased its insurance coverage to ensure that it would be able to recover from such incidents in the future.

The bank's staff were also trained in emergency procedures to ensure that they would be able to respond effectively to such incidents in the future. The bank's management was deeply saddened by the incident, but they were determined to continue their work and provide quality service to their customers. The bank also offered its condolences to the families of the employees who were injured in the explosion, and it provided financial assistance to those who were affected by the incident.

PAPER CITY DAY

The business men of Piper City feel that a great injustice has been done them in advertising games which went over the 1st-class. Now they have taken the matter in their own hands and are going to have a regular, old-fashioned Piper City Day, and a ball game.

FRESH AND STANDARD GROCERIES
Prices, about $75 per acre.
